

FRIENDS OF THE WARREN LIBRARY

Who We Are

In 1979, several concerned individuals with the common desire to make the Warren Public Library (known today as the Warren-Trumbull County Public Library) one of the best in Ohio met to form the Friends of the Warren Library (FOWL).

Today, Friends members have one thing in common - a conviction that a community's library is one of its most important assets, serving as a basic repository of knowledge and information, as well as an important channel of entertainment and culture.

What We Do

The Friends generate their operating funds from membership dues, contributions, an on-going book sale, and Warren's largest book sale held annually the first weekend in August.

The Friends use their funds to purchase items to enhance the library, such as books, shelving, furniture for the sitting areas, and items for the Children's Department. The Friends also support various library programs throughout the year.

How Can You Become a Friend?
